Social Networking

Social Networking is the glue that holds the internet together. If you take Social Networking, Freelancer's, and Crowd Funding and throw them together, you have iincmm.com, a powerful marketing company currently under construction, but waiting for you.

The Missing Link

We have seen the advent of entrepreneurs start their own business as a result of the web, better known as freelancers. Social Networking has created a conduit for people to communicate and conduct business with each other without the limitations of borders, time zones, oceans or continents. Crowd Funding now provides the money and funding to make people's dreams come true, without the humiliation of the lending process of banks and other lending institutions. However the web is so convoluted with phony scams claiming to help bring these three groups together, because of this many eventually give up on their dreams and passions. Could iincmm.com be the missing link, the solution

The creator has been working with internet marketing for the last seven years. He has a background in website marketing, app development, and information technology. If there are three personality traits that describe him. They would be the following three.

to bringing these groups together.

What is iincmm.com or who is behind this site.

IinCMM.com real intentions is to help people achieve financial independence. How do they anticipate bringing this about? What method will iincmm.com use to help people become financially free. The creators of this site claim that they will use the appeal of social networking, versatility of freelancers, and the generosity of crowd funding to create a synergy of trust.

Though the site is a members only site, any one can join, but only those who have been invited can conduct business through this site. So how do you get an invitation, one of the members on the wall, a special area on the site that list those who have been invited. Those who are invited do not have to pay any membership fees at present, though the creator of the site, said that membership would not be free forever.

The most spectacular feature of this site, is that the site pays members an entry fee. There is also a commission giving to the highest producer each month, the creator has plans to offer this commission weekly.

We asked this crucial question. How do those seeking to do business with this site benefit?

Currently those who start projects on crowd funding websites, have great ideas, some have put a lot of time into their inventions, business ideas, books, movie ideas, recipes, gaming software and a host of other projects. However they are missing the primary factor that could make the difference between a successful funded project or one that runs its course and fades away. The creator claims he has the formula that will unlock this primary element. After pressuring him a little, he still refused to share this primary element, but would not call it a secret. I guess you will have to join the site and receive an invitation to learn what this primary element is. He also said that the same factor hindered those who consider themselves freelance entrepreneur's.

When visiting the site you will right away be greeted with an offer to purchase his first book Ever Caught A Rabbit In A Cornfield. The book is only a $1.99, but he promise that it is worth every penny. It is available as a eBook, and a paperback version can be specially ordered for $6.00 with free shipping. We bought a copy of the book, and we were absolutely intrigued by the book. You can purchase the book on other sites like amazon.com, barnesandnoble.com, however he claims those versions have some errors, due to his eagerness to publish his first book, so if you want the revised version or the paperback version, you can only find it on his site. He also made claims that his connection with the previous publisher is currently severed not by choice, so he does not receive royalties for the versions on amazon.com and barnesandnobles.com at present. So please purchase from his website, his site accepts paypal.com transitions.

We tried to get him tell us more about how he would pull off his two greatest ambitions when it comes to business.

- 1 A world free of the need of worrying about money.
- 2 Helping others achieve their greatest desires and passions.

He would tell us this, that he is working on a project called a hundred for a hundred, but would not elaborate at the present time.

On the surface the creator of this ambitious website, seems very pleasant, but we could not help but to think that he was holding back. You could look in his eyes and see the wheels are spinning, you get the impression he wanted say so much more but was hesitant. You also can tell that his mind never turns off.

We enjoyed this brief news story about iincmm.com and look forward to checking in on the endeavor to merge social networking, freelancing, and crowd funding to help people achieve financial independence in the near future.

He did say this in closing, he needs the help of would be like minded people to grow the site.
